The system didn't help matters much. "The babies were born, and I just pushed the covers off the baby and left them lying there with the covers on the table," I was told. "It's like, the babies just lying there, headless and the mother is like, 'Oh, that's strange, the baby's dead and the baby's not dead.'"

It was a common sight in the hospital. Mothers were told to push the baby out, and then the baby would be taken to the nursery. But the babies were often found dead, and the mothers were told to push the baby out again. "It was a common sight in the hospital.
